MANNERS.

From EXERSON'S ESSAYS, Second Somes, (just published. C. S. Francis, 232 Broadway.) [Continued. 'To say what good of fashion we can,—it rests our own sense of propriety, constitutes the foun- for bread, and if he wishes for sassafras or arsedation of all chivalry. There is almost no kind of self-reliance, so it be sane and proportioned, which fashion does not occasionally adopt, and give it the freedom of its saloons. A sainted soul is always elegant, and, if it will, passes un-challenged into the most guarded ring. But so will Jock the teamster pass, in some crisis that brings him thither, and find favor, as long as his head is not giddy with the new circumstance, and the iron shoes do not wish to dance in wallzes and cotillons. For there is nothing settled in manners, but the laws of behavior yield to the energy of the individual. The maiden at her first ball, the countryman at a city dinner, believes that there is a ritual according to which every act and compliment must be performed, or the failing party must be cast out of this presence. Later, they learn that good sense and character make their own forms every moment, and speak or abstain, take wine or refuse it, stay or go, sit in a chair or sprawl with children on the floor, or stand on their head, or what else soever, in a new and aboriginal way : and that strong will is always in fashion, let who will be unfashionable. All that fashion demands is composure, and self content. A circle of men perfectly well-bred would be a company of sensible persons, in which every man's native manners and character appeared. If the fashionist have not this quality, is nothing. We are such lovers of self-reliance, that we excuse in a man many sins, if he will show us a complete satisfaction in his position, which asks no leave to be, of mine, or any man's good opinion. But any deterence to some eminent man or woman of the world, forfeits all privilege of nobility. He is an underling: I have nothing to do with him; I will speak with his A man should not go where he cannot carry his whole sphere or society with him,—not bodily, the whole circle of his friends, but atmospherically. He should preserve in a new company the same attitude of mind and reality non, which his daily associates draw him to, else he is shorn of his best beams, and will be an orphan in the merriest club. "If you could see Vich Ian Vohr with his tail on !---" But Vich Ian Vohr must always carry his belongings in some fashion, if not added as honor, then

There will always be in society certain persons who are mercuries of its approbation, and whose glance will at any time determine for the curious their standing in the world. These are the chamberlains of the lesser gods. Accept their coldness as an omen of grace with the loftier deities, and allow them all their privilege. They are clear in their office, nor could they be thus formidable, without their own merits. But do not measure the importance of this class by their pretension, or imagine that a fop can be the dis-penser of honor and shame. They pass also at their just rate; for how can they otherwise, in circles which exist as a sort of herald's office for the sifting of character?

As the first thing man requires of man, is reality, so, that appears in all the forms of society. We pointedly, and by name, introduce the parties to each other. Know you before all heaven and earth, that this is Andrew, and this is Gregory;—they look each other in the eye; they grasp each other's hand, to identify and signalize each other. It is a great satisfaction.

A gentleman never dodges: his eyes look straight forward, and he assures the other party, first of all, that he has been met. For what is it that PDUCATIONAL HABIT, prejudices arely imbibed, pecumary interest, profession.

The analysis of the analysis of the analysis of the standing enemies of what they stigmatize as "patent medicines." And transcendant must be that Balana whose bealing virtues have extorted so many communications whose bealing virtues have extorted so many communications. We cite a few from men whose opinions would not suffer by comment in their profession.

We cite a few from men whose opinions would not suffer by comment of the first of the fi all, that he has been met. For what is it that we seek, in so many visits and hospitalities? Is it your draperies, pictures, and decorations? Or, do we not insatiably ask, Was a man in the house? I may easily go into a great household where there is much substance, excellent provision for comfort, luxury, and taste, and yet not encounter there any Amphitryon, who shall sub-ordinate there appendages. I may go into a cottage, and find a farmer who feels that he is the man I have come to see, and frents me accordingly. It was therefore a very natural point of old feudal ctiquette, that a gentleman who re-ceived a visit, though it were of his sovereign, should not leave his roof, but should wait his arrival at the door of his house. No house, though it were the Tuilleries, or the Escurial, is good for any thing without a master. And yet we are not often gratified by this hospitality. Every body we know surrounds himself with a fine house, fine books, conservatory, gardens, equipage, and all manner of toys, as screens to interpose between himself and his guest. Does it not seem as if man was of a very sly, elusive nature, and dreaded nothing so much as a full rencontre front to front with his fellow? It were unmerciful, I know, quite to abolish the use of these screens, which are of eminent convenience, whether the guest is too great, or too little. We call together many friends who keep each other in play, or, by luxuries and ornaments we amuse the young people, and guard our retirement. Or if, perchance, a searching realist comes to our gate, before whose eye we have no care to stand, then again we run to our curtain, and hide our-selves as Adam at the voice of the Lord God in the garden. Cardinal Caprara, the People's legate at Paris, defended himself from the glances of Napoleon, by an immense pair of green spec-tacles. Napoleon remarked them, and speedily managed to rally them off: and yet Napoleon, in managed to tally them to the third turn, was not great enough with eight hun-dred thousand troops at his back, to face a pair of freedorn eyes, but fenced himself with etiquette, and with triple barriers of reserve: and, as all the world knows from Madame de Stael, ways be truth, as really all the forms of goodbreeding point that way.

I have just been reading, in Mr. Hazlitt's translation, Montaigne's account of his journey into Italy, and am struck with nothing more time. His arrival in each place, the arrival of a gentleman of France, is an event of some consequence. Wherever he goes, he pays a visit to whatever prince or gentleman of note resides upon his road, as a duty to himself and to civilization. When he leaves any house in which he agreeably than the self respecting fashions of the time. His arrival in each place, the arrival of a

The complement of this graceful self-respect, and that of all the points of good breeding I must require and insist upon, is deference. I like that revery chair should be a throne, and hold a king. I prefer a tendency to stateliness, to an excess of fellowship. Let the incommunicable objects of nature and the metaphysical isolation of man. nature and the metaphysical isolation of man teach us independence. Let us not be too much acquainted. We should meet each morning, as from foreign countries, and spending the day together, should depart at night, as into morning, as from foreign countries, and spending the day together, should depart at night, as into foreign countries. In all things I would have the island of a men inviolate. Let us sit apart as the gods, talking from peak to peak "I around Olympus. No degree of affection need invade this religion. This is myrth and rosemery to keep the other sweet. Lovers should guard their strangeness. If they fore to much, all slides into confusion and met mess. It is easy to push this defence to a China e etiquette; but coolness and absence of heat and haste indicate fine qualities. A gentleman makes no noise: a lady is serene. Proportionate is our disgust at those invaders who fill a studious house with To say what good of fashion we can,—it rests on reality, and hates nothing so much as pretenders;—to exclude and mystify pretenders, and send them into everlasting 'Coventry,' is its design. We contemn, in turn, every other gift of light. We contemn, in turn, every other gift of the world; but the habit even in little nic, to ask me for them, and not to hold out his plate, as if I knew siready. A MERICAN ELASTIC SUSPENDERS AND WEB-BING.—The surprising perfection attained by the late improvements of the subscriber in compounding India Rubber and adapting it to the manufacture of Elastic Webbing, by the aid of his new machinery warrants him in saying that the Suspenders now offered for sale by him are the best ever made. Among the advantages he claims in his mode of manufacture over that of Mr. Goodyear, is freedom from the sulpharcus smell so inseparable from G.'s. The peculiar and exclusive property of retaining their elasticity, and the great increase of stiffness without additional bulk or weight. It is a common complaint among those who have used Mr. G.'s suspenders that they lose their elasticity after being worn a short time.—Thus is entirely obvinted by Day's process, and declers in suspenders or webbing are invited to examine the goods at No. 28 Maiden lame. "In these days of Cheap Literature, when every kind of anmby-pamby trash is flooded weekly from the press, it is really refleshing to rise from the perusal of such a valuable and interesting work. The writer appears to have struck out for himself an entirely new path, and has so entertained and meraperased it with the green Edves of instruction, and the oright flowers of beautiful imagery and stirring incident, that to a lover of nature in its wildest and most sublime teachings, resents attractions such as, in our opinion, very few works of the kind possess. 19. On the subject of Exporting Beef, Pork, Ham Lard, Cheese, &c., from the United States to England, and roper mode of prepring the same.

Cheese, &c. from the United States to England, and roper mode of preparing the same (37)—In addition to the foregoing, which was prepared by the Hon. H. L. Ellsworth, and presented to Congress at its last Session, and ten thousand copies ordered to be printed, the Publishers have connected with it a valuable Treatise on Raising Swine, and the best Methods of Fattesiang Pork, by Henry Colman of Mass.

And to render the work still more worthy the attention of Farmers, they have also added an invaluable Treatise on Geology as Connected with Agriculture, by Willis Garlord, of Onondays Co., N. Y. This Treatise alone is considered by many practical farmers as worth twice the cost of the whole work.

on each Science, and upwards of low Experiments.

This fassay on the Chemistry of the Four Ancient Elements is chiefly intended for those who have not studied the science Abstrase details and theories are avoided, useful and interesting information supplied, and instruction united with enter alainment. Explicit directions are given respecting the performance of the Experiments.

Experiments of the Experiments.

Experiment and thoroughly understands the nature of it, will hardly ever forget the panciple it illustrates. It has been the object of the writer to incoduce only such experiments as may be performed with simproduce only such experiments as may be performed with simtroduce only such experiments as may be performed with aimple apparatus, and such as may be easily and cheaply procured. Extracts from the Preface.

The two books above named have met with a rapid and extensive sale in England, and continue to be very popular and in great demand, notwithstanding each one is sold at about four times the price of the cost of both works together in the edition printed in the "Series of Useful Books for the People."

The above works are neatly printed on clear new type with about 150 engravings, and together are sold at the exceedingly low price of 25 cents: five copies for $1.

For nearly she years she was afflicted with a most investme engineer on the body, which at times was so bad, connected with a termination commenced in the roots of the bair, and grad. The companion the whole head was enveloped, and then it naticked the ears, and nan down the neek, and continuing to increase intil it covered the most of the body. It commenced with a small pumple or pustule, from which water at 3rt discharged; this predisced great tiching and burning; then matter or pus tomed, the state cracked and blod, and the pus discharged freely. The sufferings of the child were to great a simost wholly to prevent matural rest, angales door from the discharges to offensive as to make it district to pay that particular attention the anture of the case required. The discuss was called Scaid Hend and general Salt Rheum. We tried various remedies, with hithe benefit, and considered her case almost expond the reach of medicine; but from the known virtue of your Saraparalla, we were induced to give it a trial. Before the first bottle was all used, we perceived an improvement in the appearance of the carpino; but the change was so rapid for the better, that we could soverely give credence to the evidence of our own eyes. We continued it use for a few weeks, and the result is a perfect cure. To all Parcaits we would say; If you have childres suffering with any disease of the skin, use Bands's Sarsaparilia. With feelings of gratitude and respect, we are yours. &c. The following certificates recently received will be read with interest, and for further proof the reader is referred to a
